1	Why is <Encanto> different from previous Disney animations?
anlysis	In <Encanto>, the villain (villain) does not appear. However, because of each other's thoughts and personalities, there are conflicting structures in the story. In a Disney story that likes black and white separation, such as a good hero and a bad villain, it is not common to deal only with conflict without a villain appearing.
our view	In the movies (Frozen, Coco) before the Encanto movie came out, the villain came out clearly. But In Encanto, there are no villains. So, I agree with this opinion.
anlysis	Encando started to tell a story different from the romance-oriented composition, such as a prince and princess getting married. In particular, <Encanto> is special in that it shows well the various hierarchical relationships and problems that can occur within a family or in any group.
our view	Most Disney movies had romance. Thus, I agree with this opinion that Encanto focuses on a family story rather than a romance.

2	Family relationships and home
analysis	Home is a material that has many meanings. A home is not simply a "place where people live." Various things happen in the house, and the house contains everything such as psychological stability, memories and bad memories.
	ex. The house shakes and cracks whenever negative elements come out, such as when family members have problems, when relationships with each other have problems, etc.
our view	I agree with this opinion that the house is about to collapse when Mirabel goes to Bruno's room because Bruno is a family member that Abuella turns away from, and the house cracks when Mirabel and Abuella fight or when Mirabel and Isabella fight.

3	Encanto's message
analysis	The movie Encanto continues to send the message that it's okay to be less than perfect. Even if everyone in the world looks perfect and only you look shabby, the truth is that it is not. The movie showed this very well by expressing perfection as a symbol of 'ability' with fairytale imagination.
our view	In Encanto, I think that the message that "everyone is not perfect" was well expressed by characters who had no weaknesses and only their strengths and abilities were highlighted, losing their abilities and revealing their weaknesses through songs. So, I agree with this opinion.

4	the importance of dialogue
analysis	Misunderstandings and discord among family members are difficult to resolve without 'conversation'. Although they live in a community in the same house, they taboo the name of Bruno, who left his family, and there are many secrets hidden in Encanto, as if he were hiding worries and secrets that he could not tell anyone. And finally, the secret is revealed, and only after reconciliation does peace come again.
our view	Mirabel doesn't like Isabella because she thinks that Isabella is always pretty like a princess and only pursues perfection. However, through her well-timed conversations with Isabella and her singing of Isabella, Mirabel realizes that Isabella is a challenging and enterprising woman. Also, the madrigal family lived in tension not to mention Bruno when they didn't talk about it, but as they talked with Bruno, the tension that had been running in the family disappeared. Therefore, I agree with this opinion that Encanto shows the importance of family dialogue.
